As Monkeypox Cases Spread, Report Shows Gates Foundation, WHO, Pharma Execs Took Part in Monkeypox Pandemic 'Simulation'

The World Health Organization on Friday held an emergency meeting to discuss the outbreak of monkeypox after more than 100 cases were reported across 12 countries, as a report surfaced showing the Gates Foundation, WHO and Pharma execs in March 2021 conducted a monkeypox pandemic "simulation."

The World Health Organization (WHO) on Friday held an emergency meeting to discuss the outbreak of monkeypox after more than 100 cases were reported across 12 countries.

Days before the WHO convened, the Biden administration placed a $119 million order for monkeypox vaccines after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) confirmed six people in the U.S. were being monitored for the viral infection, and one person had tested positive.

Belgium on Sunday became the first country to introduce a compulsory 21-day quarantine for monkeypox patients after reporting four cases of the disease in the last week, Politico reported.

The 100 newly reported cases, or suspected cases, garnered attention because many of them do not appear to be linked to travel to Africa, where in some regions, monkeypox is endemic.

Cases were reported in Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Israel, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and the U.K. No deaths are reported as of yet.

The number of identified cases in Europe is a record, described by Germany's armed forces medical services as "the largest and most widespread outbreak … ever seen in Europe," while its spread in the U.K. was described as "unprecedented."

U.K. public health officials warned more monkeypox cases are being detected "on a daily basis" and that there "could be really significant numbers over the next two or three weeks," though they did not specify what "numbers" would be considered "really significant."

The manner in which monkeypox may have spread — through sexual health services and sexual contact between men — also may have helped to heap attention on this new outbreak.

Many of the recent cases were traced to two "superspreader" events that involved situations in which men came into close physical contact, including 30 monkeypox cases in Spain traced to a single adult sauna in Madrid.

Monkeypox cases reported in Belgium appear to be connected to a recent gay "fetish festival."

For some, these developments may bring to mind the early onset of HIV, which at the time was connected to sexual contact among males, and to remarks by Dr. Anthony Fauci that he visited gay saunas and bars during the early years of the HIV outbreak to understand how the virus was spreading.

WHO Europe regional director Hans Kluge last week expressed concerns about transmission at "mass gatherings, festivals, and parties."

However, other public health professionals said there is a low risk to the public and a low likelihood that the epidemic will last long.

Meanwhile, questions are popping up about the similarity between a March 2021 tabletop "simulation" of a monkeypox outbreak and a similar simulation in 2019 — Event 201 — which correctly "predicted" the COVID-19 pandemic

Monkeypox — what is it?

Monkeypox was first discovered in 1958 in monkeys, although they are not the source of the virus. It was first identified in humans in 1970.

The virus is particularly prevalent in Central and West Africa and is considered a rare zoonotic disease, which means that it is caused by germs that spread between animals and people.

Monkeypox typically is spread by wild animals, such as in instances when a human is bitten or comes into contact with animal blood or bodily fluids. However, human-to-human transmission, while rare, is possible.

The virus is known to enter the human body through broken skin, the respiratory tract, or the eyes, nose or mouth, for instance through large respiratory droplets or through contact — including sexual contact — with bodily fluids or lesions, or indirectly through contaminated clothing or linens.

However, "common household disinfectants can kill it."

A prior outbreak — the first to occur outside of the African continent — occurred in the U.S. in 2003, linked to animals shipped to Texas from Ghana.

And in July 2021, monkeypox was confirmed in a Texas individual who had returned to Dallas from Nigeria, according to the CDC.

Symptoms of monkeypox infection tend to be mild, and include fever, rash and swollen lymph nodes, and occasionally intense headache, back pain, muscle aches, lack of energy and skin eruptions which can cause painful lesions, scabs or crusts.

There are two strains of monkeypox: the West African and Central African strains. The latter is known as the deadlier of the two, but the cases identified in the recent outbreak all appear to have been caused by the milder West African strain.

Did March 2021 'pandemic exercise' predict monkeypox outbreak?

In October 2019, just weeks before the outbreak of COVID-19, the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security, along with the World Economic Forum (WEF) and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, organized "Event 201," a "high-level pandemic exercise" that mirrored what later followed with COVID-19 pandemic.

In March 2021, the Nuclear Threat Initiative (NTI), in conjunction with the Munich Security Conference, held a "tabletop exercise on reducing high-consequence biological threats."

This "fictional exercise scenario" involved the simulation of "a deadly, global pandemic involving an unusual strain of monkeypox virus that first emerged in the fictional nation of Brinia and spread globally over 18 months."

According to NTI, this exercise, which was "[d]eveloped in consultation with technical and policy experts," brought together "19 senior leaders and experts from across Africa, the Americas, Asia, and Europe with decades of combined experience in public health, biotechnology industry, international security, and philanthropy."

The exercise culminated in a report, published November 2021, titled "Strengthening Global Systems to Prevent and Respond to High-Consequence Biological Threats: Results from the 2021 Tabletop Exercise Conducted in Partnership with the Munich Security Conference."

This report contains key findings from the exercise, as well as "actionable recommendations for the international community."

The outcome of this "exercise scenario" found the fictional pandemic, "caused by a terrorist attack using a pathogen engineered in a laboratory with inadequate biosafety and biosecurity provisions and weak oversight," led to "more than three billion cases and 270 million fatalities worldwide."

The fictional start date of the monkeypox pandemic in this exercise was May 15, 2022. The first European case of monkeypox was identified on May 7, 2022.

Key findings from the report included:

- The "need" for "a more robust, transparent detection, evaluation, and early warning system that can rapidly communicate actionable information about pandemic risks."
- "Gaps in national-level preparedness," which will require national governments to "improve preparedness by developing national-level pandemic response plans built upon a coherent system of 'triggers' that prompt anticipatory action, despite uncertainty and near-term costs," described as a "no-regrets" policymaking basis.
- "Gaps in biological research governance" in order to "meet today's security requirements" and be "ready for significantly expanded challenges in the future."
- "Insufficient financing of international preparedness for pandemics," and a lack of financing for countries to "make the essential national investments in pandemic preparedness."

Key recommendations included:

- Bolstering international systems "for pandemic risk assessment, warning, and investigating outbreak origins," calling upon the WHO to "establish a graded, transparent, international public health alert system" and the United Nations system to "establish a new mechanism for investigating high-consequence biological events of unknown origin."
- The development and implementation of "national-level triggers for early, proactive pandemic response," including the adaptation of the "no-regrets" approach to responding to pandemics via "anticipatory action" based on "triggers" that would automatically generate a response to "high-consequence biological events."
- The establishment of "an international entity dedicated to reducing emerging biological risks associated with rapid technology advances," that would "support interventions throughout the bioscience and biotechnology research and development life cycle — from funding, through execution, and on to publication or commercialization."
- The development of "a catalytic global health security fund to accelerate pandemic preparedness capacity building in countries around the world," which would include "[n]ational leaders, development banks, philanthropic donors, and the private sector" with the aim of establishing and funding "a new financing mechanism to bolster global health security and pandemic preparedness" and that would incentivize "national governments to invest in their own preparedness over the long term."
- The establishment of "a robust international process to tackle the challenge of supply chain resilience," based on a "high-level panel' that would be convened by the UN secretary-general "to develop recommendations for critical measures to bolster global supply chain resilience for medical and public health supplies."

The above recommendations were borne out in practice during the simulated monkeypox pandemic scenario.

As stated in the report:

> "In national pandemic response plans, specific readiness measures would be 'triggered' based on factors related to the potential severity of the outbreak, expected delays in situational awareness, and the time it would take to implement response measures and see results."

What would be "triggered" bears a remarkable similarity to the COVID-19-related measures of the past two-plus years.

The report states:

> "Although triggered actions would vary depending upon the particular needs of the country, in most cases the goals are the same: slow the spread of disease to buy time and flatten the epidemiological curve, while using that time to scale up public health and medical systems to keep up with growing caseloads and save lives.
> "NPIs [non-pharmaceutical interventions] such as mask mandates and ceasing mass gatherings were deemed to be critical for blocking chains of disease transmission.
> "Participants generally did not endorse travel restrictions such as border closures, but travel health screening measures [i.e., vaccine passports] were viewed as valuable."

According to the results of the simulated scenario, the fictional countries that "prioritized keeping their economies open, undertaking little-to-no NPIs, and downplaying the virus and its potential impacts … have experienced much worse outcomes in terms of illness and mortality" than those fictional countries that "promptly adopted aggressive measures to slow virus transmission," such as "shutting down mass gatherings, imposing social-distancing measures, and implementing mask mandates," in addition to establishing "large-scale testing and contact-tracing operations."

Gates Foundation, pharma execs, WHO participated in monkeypox pandemic simulation

Who took part in the NTI's monkeypox pandemic simulation?

Key participants included:

- Dr. Ruxandra Draghia-Akli, global head of Johnson & Johnson Global Public Health R&D and Janssen Research & Development.
- Dr. Chris Elias, president of the global development division of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation.
- Dr. George Gao, director-general of the Chinese Center for Disease Control and Prevention (the Chinese CDC).
- Dr. Margaret (Peggy) A. Hamburg, interim vice president for global biological policy and programs at NTI, a member of the global health scientific advisory committee for the Gates Foundation and a member of the board of GAVI-The Vaccine Alliance.
- Sam Nunn, a former U.S. senator who is the founder and co-chair of NTI.
- Dr. Michael Ryan, executive director of the WHO Health Emergencies Program and a highly visible figure during COVID-19 times.
- Dr. Petra Wicklandt, head of corporate affairs for Merck.

Several of the participants listed above also "participated" in Event 201.

The authors of the report also stand out for their background.

For example, Dr. Jaime M. Yassif, vice president of NTI global biological policy and programs, holds a Ph.D. in biophysics from the University of California-Berkeley and a master's degree in science and security from the King's College, London, war studies department.

Yassif previously led the initiative on biosecurity and pandemic preparedness at the Open Philanthropy Project, including the management of nearly $40 million in biosecurity grants, the "initiation of new biosecurity work in China and India," and "establishment of the Global Health Security Index."

She also previously advised the U.S. Department of Defense on science and technology policy and worked on the Global Health Security Agenda at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Co-author Chris Isaac, program officer for NTI's Global Biological Policy and Programs team, "has been involved with synthetic biology through the Internationally Genetically Engineered Machines Competition since the start of his scientific career" and "is an alumnus of the Emerging Leaders in Biosecurity Fellowship at the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security."

The report is the product of a partnership between NTI, co-founded by Nunn and Ted Turner, and the Munich Security Conference.

Both NTI ($3.5 million, for "vaccine development") and the Munich Security conference ($1.2 million) received funding from the Gates Foundation.

The report itself was funded by the Open Philanthropy project, one of whose main funders is Dustin Moscovitz, co-founder of Facebook along with Mark Zuckerberg.

Open Philanthropy, over the past decade, has provided donations and grants to the following entities and for the following purposes:

- $166.9 million for "global health."
- $90.2 million for "biosecurity and pandemic preparedness."
- $18 million for "global catastrophic risks."
- $40.2 to Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security.
- $17.9 to NTI.
- $2.2 to The Guardian.
- $1.6 to Rockefeller University.

Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security at center of multiple tabletop exercises

NTI and the Munich Security Conference are not new to "tabletop exercises" — their report highlights previous simulations, including a 2019 report titled "A Spreading Plague," and a 2020 report titled "Preventing Global Catastrophic Biological Risks."

Other simulations in the recent past, in addition to Event 201, include:

- Operation Dark Winter (June 2001, less than three months before the 9/11 attacks and subsequent anthrax scare, "examining the national security, intergovernmental, and information challenges of a biological attack on the American homeland").
- Operation Atlantic Storm (January 2005, "designed to mimic a summit of transatlantic leaders forced to respond to a bioterrorist attack").
- The Clade X exercise (May 2018, "to illustrate high-level strategic decisions and policies that the United States and the world will need to pursue in order to prevent a pandemic or diminish its consequences should prevention fail"). Yassif helped develop the Clade X exercise.

The common denominator among all of these simulations? The Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security, which published a document titled "The SPARS Pandemic 2025-2028," comprising "a futuristic scenario that illustrates communication dilemmas concerning medical countermeasures (MCMs) that could plausibly emerge in the not-so-distant future."

It's Time to Follow the Science. Join our Campaign!

Predictions for the future don't end there, however. For instance, in September 2017, NTI and the WEF organized a roundtable discussion on the current state of biological risks presented by technology advancement in light of the Fourth Industrial Revolution.

And in January 2020, NTI and the WEF again joined forces, issuing a report titled "Biosecurity Innovation and Risk Reduction: A Global Framework for Accessible, Safe and Secure DNA Synthesis."

According to the report:

> "Rapid advancements in commercially available DNA synthesis technologies — used for example to artificially create gene sequences for clinical diagnosis and treatment — pose growing risks, with the potential to cause a catastrophic biological security threat if accidentally or deliberately misused."

Merck, whose head of corporate affairs participated in the monkeypox simulation, was the subject of an FBI and CDC investigation in November 2021 regarding 15 suspicious vials labeled "smallpox" at a Merck facility in Philadelphia.

Bill Gates no stranger to predicting the future

Bill Gates has himself been remarkably prescient with his predictions of future events.

Here are some of Gates' predictions:

- In a November 2015 TED talk, he stated "[i]f anything kills over 10 million people in the next few decades, it's most likely to be a highly infectious virus rather than a war. Not missiles, but microbes."
- In a 2017 speech at that year's Munich Security Conference, he said "the next epidemic could originate on the computer screen of a terrorist intent on using genetic engineering to create a synthetic version of the smallpox virus," arguing in favor of the merger of "health security" and "international security."
- In May 2021, Gates said "[s]omebody who wants to cause damage could engineer a virus so that the cost, the chance of running into this is more than that of naturally-caused epidemics such as the current one … [t]he ways the humans interact with other species, these viruses are coming across the species barriers whether it's bats or monkeys."
- In November 2021, Gates publicly pondered, "[y]ou say, OK, what if a bioterrorist brought smallpox to 10 airports? You know, how would the world respond to that? There's naturally-caused epidemics and bioterrorism-caused epidemics that could even be way worse than what we experienced today."
- In February 2022, Gates warned that the next pandemic "… won't necessarily be a coronavirus or even the flu. It is likely to be a respiratory virus. Because, with all the human travel we have now, that's the one that can spread in such a rapid way," emphasizing the significance of providing sufficient funds to the private sector and academia to build better vaccines, therapeutics and diagnostics.
- Earlier this month, Gates called for the development of a so-called "Global Epidemic Response and Mobilization" (GERM) initiative, stating that present WHO funding was "not at all serious about pandemics" and that $1 billion a year would be needed to operate this initiative.
- Also this month, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation announced "a new financial commitment of up to US$125 million to help end the acute phase of the COVID-19 pandemic and prepare for future pandemics," with much of the money going toward "strengthening health systems in low-income countries, enhancing integrated disease monitoring, expanding access to pandemic tools, and helping countries manage COVID-19 alongside other pressing health needs."
- In his new book, "How to Prevent the Next Pandemic," Gates argues that, despite COVID fatigue, the world must focus on preparing for future pandemics, regardless of whether a disease is circulating.

When is Bill Gates going to be captured and put in prison? It's obvious he is behind all of the fear mongering so he can sell his vaccines to kill more people.

What does that tell you? Every time they test plan for a virus, it eventually pops up. That means these viruses, if they even exists, are pushed as fear engines designed to scare more people into running for an mRNA injection. And just how is money-pox spreading? Can they even prove how any virus spreads? Never!

No, it's just another virus hoax by the corrupted medical community and the drug cartel. Everyone needs to learn what Koch's Postulates are and why they have to be done in an isolation study.

SV 40, a monkey pox virus, was a contaminant in the polio vaccine early on. SV 40 causes cancer. I am sure that polio shot is responsible for the explosion of cancer in the baby boomer generation.

Polio as a virus never existed. The symptoms in the 50's were caused by DDT, and then later by the vaccine itself. Not a single so-called "virus" has ever been isolated by the gold standard pathogen testing method, Koch's Postulates--all virus "tests" are faked like PCR is. Any vaccine can cause cancer especially the mRNA vax.

It's spreading by close physical contact, mostly by men, so far. Last I heard, there are no deaths. Maybe the dark state picked wrong again. Of course, there are those vials of small pox that were recovered. Maybe that was supposed to be the pandemic.

No, nothing is "spreading" because contagion is a myth and no virus has ever been isolated--all of them are faked to make billion $$ profits. Germ theory and "infectious diseases" cannot be proven--not one shred of proof anywhere.

I was determined to find out why CV 19 just did not line up in July 2020 and I found the thousands of dissenting scientists that proved CV 19 does not exist and their evidence lines up and can be proven. Learn what Koch's Postulates from 1890 is and why it has to be done successfully for any virus or "contagious" bacteria to be proven to exist--none have.

Virology is a fake, junk science that has never isolated any virus. When they get the culture in the lab, they add Vero C6 cells, (monkey kidney cells) human fetal cell lines and sometimes bovine serum. Then antibiotics are added which causes a cytopathic effect on the culture--they then claim the "virus" which they never isolated did the damage to the cell lines when it was the drugs. Total quackery--never believe anything virology says, just like the vaccine industry lies to us almost daily

All viruses are hoaxes, as is contagion. Germ theory cannot be proven but terrain theory can be--because we can observe it with our own eyes.

I have a theory that each and every agency is now in the business of doing the opposite of what they were supposedly intended to do. The FDA instead of protecting consumers from potentially dangerous drugs is in the business of pushing them on all of us, the EPA instead of protecting us from environmental hazards and pollution looks away and takes bribes when a corporation is found to be polluting, the CDC instead of protecting the world from potential deadly pathogens and viruses are now in the business of creating them, FEMA instead of managing emergencies, what did they do? Stick people in trailers that made them sick, the DOD instead of defending us against foreign invaders is now in the business of manufacturing wars and attacking those who are labeled as terrorists, the DHS is supposed to protect the "homeland" but is treating every person like a terrorist and creating terrorism by turning every person against one another. Why, the ED is in the business of getting children indoctrinated, getting shots into their arms, promoting various alternative lifestyles and sowing division. The FCC instead of protecting consumers from harm when it comes to communications refuses-absolutely refuses to do its job, they have done the opposite in fact. The FAA was no where to be found when 9/11 happened same with the FBI and CIA and now they are allowing low flying aircraft to fly over your home and mine but just try to get

Very true, there is no MP virus--not been isolated, and is indeed monkey business. Covid injections are way down--states have huge stockpiles that will not be used near as much and the criminals must find new ways to kill off the population with deadly vaccines. I pray their new monkey business plan does not work and I don't think it will since they appear to have dug a huge hole for themselves with the CV 19 deadly vax.

I would just love to see any person admit they have participated in this, but history suggests they cover these things up and move on. Look at Monsanto, changed the name to Bayer and the same product that caused all the damage is still being sold with the same name Round Up just under a different company name. Hold on, I thought they were supposed to stop making this product? This is what they do. What we are up against would take every single one of us refusing to buy anything they sell because they know that there will always be someone willing to buy what they are selling so they just churn it out over and over never stopping like a sick demented machine they just keep bringing on the death and destruction.

Karen Kingston tonight on Brannon Howse Live said the same thing. and it isn't monkey pox. It what you see in end stage HIV infections,. People will die and will use to scare the sheep...again. Don't be deceived by their BS. Just taking the problem they created and looking for a way to profit from it. More vaccines.

Vaccines can cause skin eruptions and other symptoms. Viruses have never been proven to exist by Koch's Postulates and certainly animals do not spread any disease that I know of--contagion is a myth and has never been proven.

Since the opioid crisis has been in the mainstream media, and the removal of US military in Afghanistan, who no longer protect the poppy fields, the new pharmaceutical delivery system (money maker), is vaccines.

Create the problem and solution. They just keep trying to justify their so called jobs. The blood on these current and past governments hands is astounding.

Well, we know this is a lie:

According to the results of the simulated scenario, the fictional countries that “prioritized keeping their economies open, undertaking little-to-no NPIs, and downplaying the virus and its potential impacts … have experienced much worse outcomes in terms of illness and mortality” than those fictional countries that “promptly adopted aggressive measures to slow virus transmission,” such as “shutting down mass gatherings, imposing social-distancing measures, and implementing mask mandates,” in addition to establishing “large-scale testing and contact-tracing operations.”

As I keep pointing out to others when they want to say that Event 201 was just one of many such gatherings to "protect" us-- attended by these people who are heavily "invested" in all that is harming us to begin with--that, if they were seriously just trying to protect us, then why was the World so unprepared then? Seriously, if PPE was a key component to our safety, then why didn't they move mountains to rectify the gross shortage? Did they not know we had a gross shortage? If that's the case, then none of these people have any business being trusted with our health or safety!

Then suddenly we have monkey pox cat parasites infecting beef bird flu where they have

One thing I had come across that I think needs to be told is that Abbott the company who is involved in the formula shortage makes baby products, drugs and vaccines, and not only that but they were in attendance at two Covid 19 summits and there was alot of money being thrown around, it seems odd that they attended that event and now this information is being scrubbed last time I checked. I had to dig to find it yesterday now that Abbott is agreeing to get out this formula to people. I think what we are seeing is the controllers of this trying to manipulate the public into taking these vaccines they do not want to lose out on all they have invested, then when they are caught they simply edit and cover up things. This is the problem with the internet, they think they can just have Google or whoever gobble up everything and everyone can be brainwashed by social media and mainstream media if they watch that and they are good no problem, no accountability just deniability.

Both Fauci and Gates seem like Psychopaths. I would never believe anything these men say. They lie, lie, lie and anyone who believes them is quite naïve.

Yeah and come to find out there was a whole lot more to the Jeffrey Epstein story than we realize, they were all into something much bigger than just that operation, hopefully the truth of what all that was will come out. There is just too much dirt dealings for it to continue like this, every agency captured every government corrupt, something has got to give.

Thank you for this summary. Will link it into my post about bioinformatics issues between the monkeypox virus and Sars-CoV-2 spike protein at:
https://mejbcart.substack.c...
It definitely looks stranger than ever, with just this one conclusion, in case this is serious, those already injected with covid19 materials, better stay away from any monkeypox injections out there..

They experiment on animals. Then the animals get culled. Bats, pigs, chickens, now monkeys. The scientists who are performing these experiments should be culled themselves. They are the ones spreading all these diseases. From test tube or petri dish to human. They are the ones, funded by Gates, Fauci and the like who are responsible for all these pLandemics. Experimentation on animals should stop........ we now what they feel like - it's people's time to be experimented on. Animals can't even ballot or protest or vote for their rights to die painful deaths. Who advocates for them? We at least have a little peep left - but they have none. When will all this stop?!
